I am continually on the lookout for the best resources to use in training church Guest Experience teams. And a new resource â “ from the world of Customer Service â “ is going to take Guest Experiences to a new level. All churches have customers â “ they just call them by a different name. How can your church be proactive in creating an Experience that will amaze Guests (and everyone coming to your church campus), and help them prepare for worship by being genuinely welcomed? A great first step is to look to the organization that is known world-wide for its outstanding Guest Services â “ Disney. And thereâ ™s no better place to start than a brand-new book â “ â œThe Experience: The 5 Principles of Disney Service and Relationship Excellence.â • Walt Disney set the standard for Guest Services, and Disney Legends like Van France, Dick Nunis, Marty Sklar, and a host of others refined them over the years. From a single theme park in 1955, Disney has spread literally around the world (and across the oceans) with their unique methods of making everyone feel â œmagical.â • In 1983, a number of key leaders from across Walt Disney World formed a team that was designed to take the Disney Guest Experience to the next level. A part of that team was a young man tasked to enhance the service and presentation skills of the Disney Cast Members â “ Bruce Loeffler. During the next decade, Loeffler and the rest of the team successfully planned, implemented, revised, and then spread basic principles of Guest Experiences to all Disney properties. In the next two decades that followed, Loeffler continued to refine and extend those principles in his own consulting group. Now, joined by Brian Church, those principles can be found in â œThe Experience.
