Synopsis

FOR USE IN SCHOOLS AND LIBRARIES ONLY. Eden Monro came to California for a summer of sun, sand and celebrities what better way to forget about the drama back home? Until she meets her new family of strangers: a dad she hasn't seen in three years, a stepmonster and three stepbrothers. Eden gets her own room in her dad's fancy house in Santa Monica. A room right next door to her oldest stepbrother, Tyler Bruce. Whom she cannot stand. He's got angry green eyes and ego bigger than a Beverly Hills mansion. She's never felt such intense dislike for someone. But the two are constantly thrown together as his group of friends pull her into their world of rule-breaking, partying and pier-hanging.

Customer Reviews

I usually donâ™t read stories that involve forbidden love, so I was a little hesitant to read Did I Mention I Love You?, but in the end Iâ™m glad that I did because it led me to Estelle Maskame. This story was interesting for the most part, I found it to be a bit predictable at times but I find that in a lot of contemporary stories so it didnâ™t really bother me. I read contemporary stories for the journey the characters take, and I generally enjoy ones that involve love and soul searching in high school - and this book had that. Iâ™ve read some reviews where people wanted more parental presence, or how it didnâ™t seem real that this was a normal high school experience - but I completely related to all of it. The characters range from 16-18 years old, and we see them do nothing but party during summer break. This was high school to me - I saw all the parties, drugs, alcohol, and sex going on outside of school and it felt like an honest take on the story and I enjoyed reading about it to see where it took our characters. As the story progressed though, I found myself wanting more from the characters besides these teenagers who just party and do reckless things all the time. I wanted to understand and know the characters underneath all of the partying. There weren't any characters that really stood out to me, besides our main one - Eden. I really liked Eden, I mean girl had her flaws but overall she was very relatable. She's a very complex character - having to deal with the strain from her parents' divorce, insecurities, and anxiety from being in a new city for the summer, all while trying to be herself still.
